Autumn 2020

SSCE Cymru mission

Knowledge and evidence

Coordinate research and compile evidence on the experiences of Service children in education to ensure their needs are well understood.

Activity and resources

Collaborate with members of the SSCE Cymru Network to conduct activities and produce resources that will help support Service children throughout their education.

Supporting policy and systems

Work with organisations to provide evidence and impact policy relevant to supporting Service children in education.

Regional School Liaison Officers (RSLOs) for Service children

In collaboration with 160th (Welsh) Brigade, the WLGA has secured funding from the Armed Forces Covenant Fund Trust to introduce four RSLOs in Wales.

The RSLOs are hosted by four lead local authorities, the Isle of Anglesey, Newport, Pembrokeshire and the Vale of Glamorgan.

Focusing on supporting schools to understand the needs of Service children and embed activities to ensure sustainable support systems, some of the activities that are included within the RSLOs workplan include:

- Supporting local authorities with identifying the number and location of Service children in Wales
- Supporting schools with accessing funding and identifying ways to measure the impact
- Identifying ways schools can be more Armed Forces friendly
- Case managing Service children mental health and wellbeing support/specific interventions
- Collaborating with regional Armed Forces Covenant Liaison Officers (AFLOs)
- Supporting production of new SSCE Cymru resources.

For further details about the RSLO roles and contact details please visit the SSCE Cymru website.

SSCE Cymru data collection

SSCE Cymru is currently aware of around 2,200 Service children in around 430 schools in Wales. We are currently working with local authorities to establish the best way to capture data in 2020.

Why we need data:

- Welsh Government has committed £200,000 for the academic year 2020/21 to go to schools to support their Service children.
- The four new RSLOs, can work with schools that have identified Service children, to develop knowledge, embed good practice and support access to relevant grant funding and training opportunities.
- SSCE Cymru can use the data to better understand the needs of Service children in Wales and support policy change where required.
- Accurate data will be beneficial to many other organisations that form part of the SSCE Cymru network.

Covid-19 support

The SSCE Cymru website includes a Covid-19 support page, which provides information/advice/guidance and signposting to organisations and resources that are relevant to supporting Service children during the Coronavirus pandemic. The information provided may be beneficial to schools/education settings, local authorities and parents/carers of Service children.

In addition, the following content has recently been added:

- Activities that have been carried out or are taking place through SSCE Cymru
- School observations on the impact of Covid-19 on Service children
- Examples of support provided by schools to Service children
- Examples of ways schools plan to support their Service children during the recovery period.

Parent/carer of Service child/ren survey

Over the past year SSCE Cymru has carried out a school survey and discussion groups with Service children. See the SSCE Cymru website for the findings of these activities.

SSCE Cymru would now like to give parents/carers of Service children the opportunity to share their experiences about living in/moving to Wales, the impact their lifestyle has on their children's education and the support they have received from schools.

We would be interested to hear from parents/carers of Service children who are currently or have previously served in the Armed Forces as well as those that are currently living or have previously lived in Wales.

The survey will close on Friday 30th October.

Please help us to promote the survey by sharing within your own networks and contacts.

Children's Education Advisory Service (CEAS) Top tips for supporting children of Service families:

- Take time to understand and better appreciate the impact of Service life on children and young people, their development, and their long-term well-being.
- Acknowledge each child and young person as an individual. Acknowledge their past achievements and experiences but also be mindful of the impact your actions may have when they move next. How can you help prepare them for transition into a different school, country or curriculum?
- Be prepared for potential mood or behaviour changes in children, young people and their parents when a separation is due or occurring.
- Know how to actively listen and respond to tricky questions appropriately without giving false assurances.
- Don't force children and young people to talk if they don't want to but make sure that they know you or someone else is available should they want to talk.
- Be prepared for a potential drop in attainment following a transition or during a separation and acknowledge this will most likely be temporary.
- Be aware that some children and young people may have to take on a young carer's role and this might have an impact on completing homework and getting to school on time. Show an understanding and possibly offer time during the school day for studying or homework to be completed.
- Don't expect everything to return to 'normal' when an absent parent returns as readjustment can take a long time.

CEAS is a team provided by the MOD to provide educational advice and information to Service families and also offer professional educational advice to the welfare network.

The Welsh Army Welfare Service (AWS) team in Pembrokeshire have been busy over the summer providing young people across the area with a range of engaging activities designed to be fun, safe and mood enhancing. Up to 120 young people across the military community accessed specially designed resource packs along with step by step video links, professionally created to support the young artists in creating their lockdown masterpieces. To celebrate young people's work, the AWS intend to compile a book whereby, everyone involved will have a copy, which will be a positive lasting memory of these unusual times.

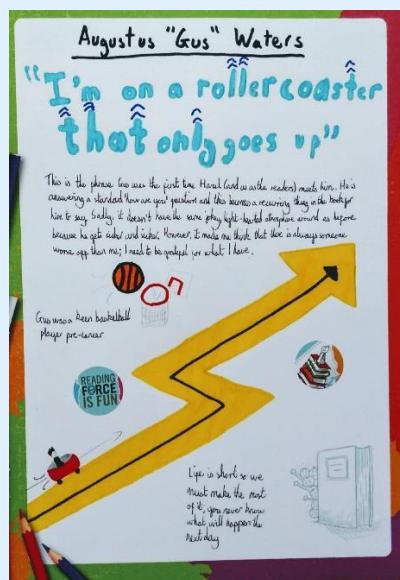

The Reading Force charity gives free books and special scrapbooks to Forces children of all ages, to encourage Forces families (serving, veterans and reservists) to share books, chat about them and fill in a scrapbook. It is available to all Forces families, at home or away. It is especially useful when a parent is separated from children due to deployment or training as a way of staying close, and to keep in touch with grandparents who may be shielding and extended family living far away and helps family stay connected.

"This is a brilliant scheme. You sent my daughter a book that she wouldn't normally have read and now she wants to read other books by the same author. Thank you!"

Reading Force resources are free and can be given to families by schools, welfare settings, and community groups as part of their pastoral support.

Schools and settings can register online to receive scrapbooks for families and children: www.readingforce.org.uk
